Hearst Wins on First Ballot.

William Randolph Hearst Wednesday made the Democratic candidate for Governor of New York at the Buffalo convention. He was nominated on the first ballot.

The nomination of Hearst was made after a most exciting session which was marked by scenes of tremendous enthusiasm for the candidate. Although the majority was overwhelming, the bitterness with which he was opposed to the last developed a situation more tense than has ever been witnessed in any convention in the political history of the State.

William V. Cooke, of Albany, placing Mr. Hearst in nomination. Congressman Burke Cochran seconded the nomination with a ringing speech. The first ballot was as follows:

Hearst 309; Sulzer 124; John A. Dixon 17.

Tammany Hall held a caucus, adopted the unit rule and authorized Murphy to cast the solid Tammany vote for Hearst.

Chas. E. Hughes, who conducted the insurance investigation, was nominated by the Republicans at Saratoga to oppose Hearst.

The People to Decide.

In his speech at Memphis Tuesday Mr. Bryan said he had carefully read the address delivered by Secretary Shaw in Memphis several years ago. He said that the Republican leaders need not be afraid of the Democrats on the tariff question. Should the latter succeed to power, the speaker believed that a reduction in the tariff would be made, but it would not be reduced to such an extent as to cause the Republicans to lose much sleep. Mr. Bryan said that his advocacy of government ownership of railroads had been greatly magnified. President Roosevelt, the speaker declared, had given the railroads to understand that unless the recent railroad rate bill was passed, he would recommend government ownership.

There was no hue and cry over this," declared the speaker.

He said he first sounded a warning note toward government ownership immediately after the last National Democratic convention. He did not want the government to own railroads; but if the national laws governing railroads should prove an entire failure, he believed each State should own its own transportation lines if the people of the State desired.

"What is more democratic than to allow the people of a State to do what they want to?" he asked.

Cuba.

The more the student of world affairs looks at Cuba the more he is mystified.
The cause of the trouble down there does not appear plainly. It has been said dissatisfaction with the rule of President Palma is at the bottom of the rebellion, but it is whispered that there is something deeper behind it; that in fact, the Cuban government is secretly conniving with the rebels to make it necessary for the United States to intervene and once for all take Cuba into the Union. What basis there is for the latter report does not appear. In any case, should the rebellion reach alarming proportions, it would be necessary for the United States to step in and stop the trouble, and it would not be enough merely to set the little government on its feet again. A government propped up by American bayonets would have little respect in Cuba or anywhere else.
It would be relatively in the position of the discredited governments in Central America.

The United States is responsible for Cuba to the world. On our assurance that there would be some kind of stable government on the island, a great deal of foreign capital has gone there, as well as money from American investors and it would be perfectly natural for all these investors to look to the United States for protection. And they have a right to it.

Annexation, therefore, whether or not there are interests in the island which are pushing matters to a crisis for the purpose of bringing it about, is being talked everywhere. It stands to reason that Americans in business in Cuba are anxious for annexation. They want to get their sugar, their fruits, their other products into this country free of duty. It is interesting at this point to remember that we get seven-twelfths of our sugar from Cuba. Sugar producers, and tobacco growers in the United States are against annexation, obviously. It would injure their markets to have Cuban sugar and tobacco on the free list.

But laying aside every question of business expediency, and taking note of neither annexationists nor antis, the fact of America's responsibility for Cuba remains. If there is disorder in the island which approaches a crisis of any character, the world will look to us to intervene. It will not be a question of free sugar and tobacco, or otherwise, but one simple justice to the nations that have been assured by the United States that Cuba is a safe place for investment and a safe place to live. If the Cubans show that they are capable of taking care of themselves, and therefore of the vast material interests which have centered in their island since the war with Spain, the United States must step in. And if intervention come, which it looks very much like it will, it can hardly mean anything less than annexation, in spite of any opposition that may develop, either here or in Cuba.

The Tariff on Wheat.

The price of trusts and tariff protected products is still advancing, while the price of farm products, especially wheat, is declining. Now wheat like iron and steel and nearly everything else is taxed in the tariff schedules, but the protection theory seems to work to the disadvantage of the wheat producer.
What he buys costs more and more, what he sells is cheaper. The reason for this shows the fallacy and unjustness of the protective system, for it plunders the farmers for the benefit of a few trusts and combines, that are enabled by the tariff to raise the price of their products, to just below the point where similar foreign products could be imported and pay the tariff tax and be sold in competition with the trust products.

The wheat farmer has no such opportunity to increase the price of the wheat he raises. He is compelled to take the price that the wheat buyers offer, or keep it in his grainery or store it in the elevators, both of which is costly.
The price of wheat varies according to the amount raised and the surplus for sale in the markets of the world. Every country that raises more wheat than its people can use must export that surplus to England and those European countries that do not raise enough to supply their own people. The price of wheat is therefore fixed by the law of supply and demand. With good crops everywhere the price of wheat is low, with poor crops the price is high. It has happened for the past few years that the wheat crop in countries other than the United States, has been short and the crop here either good or moderately so and there has therefore been a greater demand for American wheat and a high price paid for it. This year there is a bumper crop here and fair crops elsewhere so the price has declined.

The absurdity of the Republican claim that the tariff of 25 cents a bushel on wheat and the tariff on corn and oats protects the farmers is apparent.
But the fact that the farmer has to pay more for all he buys, because the tariff prevents free competition, must be still more apparent when the bills are paid.

Is it not extraordinary that some farmers vote the Republican ticket and thus perpetuate protectionism that takes from them without making a like return?

Trepoff's Death.

The sudden death of Gen. Trepoff, commander of the Imperial palace, at St. Petersburg, may have been brought about by disease, but there is ground for suspicion that it resulted from poison. For several months Gen. Trepoff had been on the proscribed list of the Russian terrorists and one or more attempts have been made to poison him. Among those who sought his life were members of his own family, and it is barely possible that someone intimately connected with him may have succeeded by slow poison in accomplishing what other assassins had failed to do.

Gen. Trepoff was the most hated man in all Russia. He was a tyrant by inclination, education and conviction; indeed, he was a genius in devising methods and means of torture of those who unfortunately fell into his grasp.
To him were charged more deaths of political prisoners and suspects than to any other official connected with the defense of the Imperial family, and it would not be surprising if the truth were known, that he was actually a victim of avengers of men and women whose deaths he had caused.

THE CARIBOU PARADE

MIGRATIONS OF THE GREAT HERDS OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

The Animals Are Strong and Gallant Swimmers and Take the Water Like a Wild Fowl—Their Leaps When Chased by the Gray Wolf.

The great caribou herds of Newfoundland migrate semiannually, and no one but an actual witness of these migrations can form an adequate conception of the marvelous number of deer which the island contains.

It is estimated that the number which crossed the Exploits river at one point during ten days in the autumn of last year exceeded 4,000. This crossing ground is only one of scores of similar trails.

Somewhere about the middle of September the migratory tide sets southward, the bluffs, with fawns, forming the vanguard of the long procession. The lazy stags hang in the rear until some storm more severe than ordinary gives an unmistakable earnest of the approach of winter.

Then all alike hurry toward the sheltered districts in the south, taking a straight course over bowlder strewn mountain heights, through tangled and obdurate masses of timber, across mountain torrents and immense lakes.

During winters of unusual severity the animals often draw quite near to the settlements on the south coast, whereupon the settlers, armed with fearsome firearms, such as sealers used some fifty years ago, straightway proceed to decimate the herds with volleys of buckshot. The price of caribou venison at such times in the city of St. John's has been known to drop to 2 cents a pound.

The foes of the caribou other than man are not numerous. Although the big gray wolf is still reported on the northern plains in considerable numbers, it is now seldom encountered in the interior. Having formerly existed in large packs, it is supposed that a migration must have occurred across the winter ice floes of the Belle Isle strait to the coast of Labrador.

Even such a redoubtable beast of prey as the gray wolf could at no time make certain of a successful foray upon an animal endowed with such great speed and endurance as a well grown caribou. A trustworthy old Newfoundland trapper says that he once witnessed an exciting chase by wolves of a couple of prickets, or two-year-old caribou stags.

Both sides doubtless were going at their utmost pace. He measured the bounds of the caribou and found them eighteen feet, while the wolves only cleared fourteen feet, so that the caribou easily gained on them when close pressed.

So much ahead were the caribou at times that they rolled over on their backs in the snow to cool their panting and heaving sides and seemed to gather new strength and refreshment from the act.

Another enemy of the caribou fawns has of late years quietly replaced the wolf, the stealthy and bloodthirsty Lynx canadensis. The island at this date swarms with these fierce cats.

Antlers are common to both sexes of the caribou. There are rare occasional stags with short legs and compact bodies which never carry antlers and show no rudimentary growth, and there also are some few does devoid of horns. A Newfoundland guide tells of seeing a dozen mature caribou in company, and only one, a nearly white stag, carried antlers.

The caribou is a strong and gallant swimmer. Each limb is like a paddle, the extended hoof answering to the blade. In the winter the frog of these enormous hoofs becomes completely absorbed, so that its shape grows concave, while very sharp, shell-like edges grow well out on the margins, assisting the animal immensely in crossing frozen lakes and scaling the steep sides of slippery rock precipices.

It is an interesting sight to watch the herds taking water with as much unconcern as wild fowls. The enormous thickness of their dense coats of hair doubtless helps to float their bodies high above the surface, giving a buoyancy almost equal to that of a cork jacket.

While swimming they rest their underjaws on the water, with nostrils slightly elevated, and carry their white scuts erect. Should they suddenly catch a whiff of wind from the hunter they give evidence of their excitement by bounding twice or thrice almost entirely clear of the water, causing a tremendous commotion.

In their migration they are usually seen to travel on the leads (deer paths) in single file, the stags, as a rule, bringing up the rear. The most forward and alert sentinels of the herds are the barren does. Next come the does with fawns, always prepared to give warning to their indolent consorts. All the savannas of the interior of Newfoundland are scored by well defined leads, which the herds invariably make for and follow.—Empire Review.

Eating Fruit.

We have always maintained, says Health, that a mixed diet is the one best suited to man under existing conditions, and it therefore naturally follows that we cannot indorse the fruitarian idea. A diet consisting solely of fruits would sustain life for only a limited period. Fruits are extremely valuable in the dietary, mainly for the following reasons: They furnish a liberal proportion of the organic salts needed by the body, they supply a large amount of water in its purest form, they aid digestion, and the majority of them have a laxative effect. When people complain that fruit disagrees with them it is presumptive proof that they have eaten it improperly. Fruits should never be eaten at the beginning of a meal and seldom at its close.

Get SCOTT'S Emulsion

When you go to a drug store and ask for Scott's Emulsion you know what you want; the man knows you ought to have it. Don't be surprised, though, if you are offered something else. Wines, cordials, extracts, etc., of cod liver oil are plentiful but don't imagine you are getting cod liver oil when you take them. Every year for thirty years we've been increasing the sales of Scott's Emulsion. Why? Because it has always been better than any substitute for it.

Huge Task.

It was a huge task to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease, as that of C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Iowa, but Electric Bitters did it. In Electric Bitters, however, I found a cure, and by them was restored to perfect health. I recommend this great tonic medicine to all with weak kidneys, liver or stomach." #### LIFE IN NICARAGUA.

Some of the Curious Customs of the Easy Going Natives.

The routine of daily life in Nicaragua is much simpler than in colder climates. There are no carpets to gather dust and moths, and there is very little furniture and few pictures and bric-a-brac to be dusted and cleaned. The clothing of the children is also much simpler, and the fashions are not variable. The children of the lower class wear no clothing until twelve or fourteen years old, and in the upper class one garment, a sort of shirt, is enough for home wear, and children sometimes go on the street in this simple garb. What marketing is not brought to the door is done by the master of the house, and so the women are free to loiter in their hammocks and nurse their babies.

The delight of going shopping is entirely unknown. If anything in the dry goods line is wanted a servant is sent to the shop who brings home an armful of whole pieces of the desired goods. If none of these suits, or if the senora desires to look at others, these are carried back and another armful is brought. The same servant can be trusted to pay for whatever is bought, for they are very honest in money matters, only indulging in small pilferings. One of the servants at the college was accustomed to go to the treasurer every month to draw the salaries of the teachers and she used to have each one's money wrapped up in a different part of her dress, and she never made a mistake by giving the wrong sum to any one.

While the women are very affectionate, if death invades their homes they do not see the despair and gloom that so often reign with us in like affliction. They seem to thoroughly take in their religious belief that their dear ones are translated to happier scenes and that the separation is only temporary. The women of the family do not go to the cemetery with their dead; only the male members and friends. There are no hearse, and the coffin is borne on their shoulders and they are relieved by different relays every little way. Colored coffins are used for young people, blue being a favorite color. The coffin is usually rented by the lower class just for the funeral, and the body is removed at the grave and interred in the ground with nothing to preserve it from contact with the earth. The wealthy have vaults in the brick wall surrounding the cemetery, but these are only rented, and it is nothing unusual to read an advertisement in the paper that if the relatives of such and such a one do not pay the rent of the vault the body will be removed by such a date.

After a death in a house, the piano, if the family is rich enough to own one, is removed from the sala or parlor to the back of the house, and though it may be moved in a room or two nearer its former station during the year it is not opened for that length of time.

His Experience.

"In order to succeed in any line of business," said the great merchant, who was given to the habit of moralizing, "one must begin at the bottom." "I tried that," replied the young man with the fringed trousers, "and now I'm on my uppers."—Columbus Dispatch.

The person renting this farm will be given the privilege of entering thereon for the purpose of sowing wheat this fall.

McCreary at Versailles.

Senator James B. McCreary was given quite a flattering reception at Versailles Monday. The interurban car on which he arrived, at 11 o'clock, was met by a brass band and a large delegation of Democrats, wearing McCreary badges. He was ushered into a carriage with Senator Blackburn, James P. Amsden, Charles B. Sullivan and V. F. Zeigler, and a procession was formed which marched to the O'Neal House, where an informal reception was held. When Senator McCreary reached the courthouse at 1:45 o'clock, the Circuit Court chamber was filled and a number of men stood near the door.

Senator Blackburn introduced his colleague and gave his candidacy very warm indorsement. He said he had known Senator McCreary intimately for fifty years, that they were classmates four years at college, served four years in the Confederate army, were in the Legislature together four years, in Congress twelve years and were colleagues in the United States Senate.

"I have known him," he said of Senator McCreary, "as a boy, as soldier, as man, as Governor and as Senator, and I have never heard an intimation of a dishonest, unworthy or unmanly act attributed to him."

Senator Blackburn expressed the hope that every Democrat within the sound of his voice who loved his State and party and believed that the people and not political bosses should rule, would vote for McCreary in November.

Senator McCreary began with acknowledgment of Senator Blackburn's introduction and paid a high tribute to Senator Blackburn who, he declared, was the victim of machine rule in Kentucky and who, had the last Senatorial election been by popular vote, would have been re-elected by forty thousand majority.

Senator McCreary devoted a large part of his speech to a discussion of national issues. Referring to a charge he said Gov. Beckham had made, that he (McCreary) had arrayed against him (Beckham) those elements opposed to his enforcement of Sunday closing laws, McCreary said Beckham had been six years the friend of the open saloon and two months the champion of the closed saloon. McCreary was willing for his record as a temperance man to be put alongside Beckham's. While in the Legislature, in 1874, he voted for a local option bill. He said he had never asked or received one dollar from the whiskey interests of Kentucky in his races and never will, and that he asked Gov. Beckham in his Mt. Sterling speech if he could say the same and had repeated the question since, yet to this day, Beckham had not answered it.

Everything Goes.

Don't fail to see Parker & James' new Fall suits before purchasing. Everything goes in the big sale now on.

Louisville for McCreary.

The lobby of the Seelbach Hotel looked like a McCreary conference Tuesday in Louisville as friends of the junior United States Senator had arrived on every train from almost every Congressional district in the State to discuss the situation in McCreary's race against Gov. Beckham. A conference was held and many of the visitors left on the noon train.

One of Mr. McCreary's chief managers made the following statement to a reporter:

"We came here on account of the report in a Louisville morning newspaper that a deal had been made through which Governor Beckham was to get the vote of Louisville in the State primary. We have canvassed the situation, have conferred with Mr. W. B. Haldeman, Mr. W. J. Semonin and others, and have been convinced that the report is not true.

"Louisville is certain to give Mr. McCreary at least 12,000 majority in the State primary."

Other McCreary men expressed complete confidence in the local situation, and said that all the Louisville managers are determined to defeat Beckham.

The $21,000 Kentucky Futurity

Kentucky's great trots, Oct. 2-13, begin at Lexington on Tuesday, October 2, with the world's richest trotting stake, the Futurity for three-year-olds. For the past two years the colt race records have been broken in this classic event. This year 25 three-year-olds, the pick of the country, are eligible, over 15 of which have records or public trials better than 2:15.

On the same day in the rich Tennessee stake, for 2:06 pacers, with 14 in the field, of which five have records better than 2:04. Also the 2:08 pace, with 20 entries is carded.

The two-year-old Futurity, the 2:16 trot, the 2:12 pace and the great 2:06 trot, with Snyder McGregor 2:05½, Mainstreet 2:05½, Angiola 2:06, Norman B. 2:06½, Goldust Maid 2:07½, etc., are on the program for the second day, Oct. 3. This will be the greatest trotting meeting ever held in Kentucky, or elsewhere, and our readers should take advantage of the half rates on railroads and attend.

Investigating Death of Ketterer.

The State Board of Control began its investigation of the death of Fred Ketterer at the Eastern Kentucky Lunatic Asylum Wednesday morning. The proceedings continued all day and evening and were resumed yesterday morning.

Ketterer died at the asylum on June 21 last, having been confined for a few weeks. He was suffering from acute mania. When stricken with the disease he was a strong, powerful man of nearly 260 pounds.

His brother and other witnesses testified that when the body was received at Ashland on June 23, his left eye was protruding, his nose was broken, three cuts were on the back of his head, and one on the left arm, and that his entire body was cut and bruised.

Two physicians of Ashland, who held a post mortem examination—Drs. W. O. Eaton and P. C. Layne—swore that in their opinion, these injuries were the cause of his death.

WILD MEN'S WEAPONS

THE PUZZLE OF THE ORIGIN OF THE BOOMERANG.

Its Cleverness of Design Is One of the Wonders of This Queer Weapon. The Mexicans' Use of the Lasso—The Best "Noose" Story.

Among the weapons which the wit of primitive man devised to aid him in the struggle for existence with animals far more formidably endowed by nature than himself, the way in which some were suggested to him by the objects which he saw around him is obvious enough, but of others we are amazed by his ingenuity in their design and his skill in their use.

The most striking instance of both this skill in use and cleverness in design is perhaps the boomerang. The perfection of balance, curve and weight in all its parts is so exact that modern dynamics have been quite unable to find a formula according to which a workable boomerang can be turned out by a carpenter, and the skill needed for the use of even the most perfect weapon is such that the untutored efforts of the most stalwart thrower of a cricket ball are ridiculously futile when he begins to make trial of it. It is scarcely too much to say that in spite of years of practice no white man has ever succeeded in becoming effective with it.

We are told that there is in Australia a tree whose seed pod is so formed that when detached by the process of natural growth from the branch it whirls through the air with a curve analogous to that of the boomerang—we see a faint suggestion of a similar movement in the gyrations of the seed pods of our own ash—and it has been conjectured that the observant "black fellow" may have received from this the first hint of the weapon which he eventually fashioned into the wonderful boomerang. It is a conjecture which will ever remain conjectural.

Others of man's early weapons—the club, the spear, the hatchet (originally, we may suppose, a stone cleft by accident to a cutting edge)—are easy to understand. Nature gave them almost ready made into his hand. The almost universal use of the bow, a weapon of much more elaboration, does not suggest a puzzle nearly so baffling as the boomerang. The force of elasticity in the sapling would be apt almost literally to "jump to the eyes" of the savage as he made his way through the bush and his friend in front released a bough from its tension to fly back and whip him across the face.

To cut such a sapling, to fasten to either end of it a sinew or a stretch of a tough creeping plant, to fit an arrow on the string and discharge it by the relaxed tension of the released string are no doubt a series of operations demanding much ingenuity and probably much time for their development, but we can imagine the steps. We are not left wondering. Even the throwing stick—that very effective application of the principle of the lever by which the wild man added so very greatly to the force and distance of his throw of his missile spear—may be supposed to have been discovered by accidental means which we can reconstruct. The boomerang still remains the biggest puzzle.

There is another adaptation of a very simple instrument which we do not know to have such antiquity as some of these, yet must always seem very marvelous when we first witness the variety of uses and the perfection to which it has been brought—that use of a bit of rope which we call lassoing. The value of the noose we can easily imagine to have been brought very early to the notice of man in his more or less natural state. Its efficacy in arresting his progress through a forest thickly hung with lianas must soon have struck him as one of the inconveniences of his existence, but we do not seem to find record at a very early stage of any practical use to which he might have put the hint so given him. The greatest wonder in the history of the noose (second only to the marvelous skill exhibited by the experts in its use) is that certain nations should have acquired the skill that they did acquire in it with so few generations of practice.

We may probably take it for granted that the American red Indian did not begin to use it until after the Spaniards had made their way to America. The origin of the word is Latin, "laqueus." There is Portuguese "laco." We "lasso" or "lace" our boots every morning, presuming that we do not spend the day in slippers. But apart from that it is not easy to see that the lasso could have had value without the horse. It is the instrument of riders on horseback. There were no horses in America, according to all who claim to speak with authority, until the Spaniards arrived here. The apparition of their cavalry was so strange as to strike terror into the hearts of the natives, who deemed horse and man some fearful composite animal.

The most skillful artist in the world with the lasso is that compound—who shall say what is the exact mixture of the ingredients?—of Spaniard and Indian that is known as Mexican, especially the Mexican of the southwestern states of the Union. But we read of various tribes of the red Indians, probably quite free from any infusion of European blood, to whom the lasso had become so familiar a weapon, so trusted in cases of emergency, that they not only used it on the galloping bison and overthrew him on the prairie, but actually lassoed the funnels of the steam engines when the trains began to invade their land. It is possible that the result may have been to give a little shake to their confidence, but their skill in the use of the noose has abundant witness.

The Mexican's dexterity has to be seen to be believed. At full gallop he will send the loop to encircle at his will the neck, the horn, the leg of the steer blundering along beside him. His little horse knows the game as perfectly as he does, throwing himself back on his haunches into the best possible position to stand the shock and the strain which he knows will arrive when the rope is drawn tight, of which one end is about the steer and the other is fastened to the horn of the big Spanish saddle. The horse stands firm and the steer tumbles. Sometimes the Mexicans will ride down and lasso the coyote or the wild turkey, for the turkey likes his legs better than his wings as means of locomotion, and will seldom fly again after he has been flushed and marked down.

The actual evolution of the lasso may be imagined easily—at first a big loop of rope thrown about the head of an animal beside which the rider galloped, then the free running noose at the end of a single rope. But the accuracy of aim with the loop is the wonder. After all, it cannot be nearly so subtle an affair as the boomerang throw, for though perhaps the Mexican excels, the white cowboy is nearly if not quite his match. But the things that a Mexican can do with a rope or bit of rawhide are marvelous. He will fit a fresh rawhide "riata" round the nut of a screw that has stuck, and unscrew it when the hide has hardened, though the white mechanic, with his specially made wrench, has failed. You may be told this tale—and it is a credible one—by many who have worked on the railways in the Mexican republic.

The best noose story is a British one. Like many of the best stories, it is a bus driver's story, and, like all of the best stories, it is an old story. Bus A and Bus B were together in a block. The driver of Bus A had the end of his whip latched up into a little noose and kept playing with it, putting his finger through it and dragging it tight, then loosening it again. He also "kept saying nothing" and looking nowhere in particular; nevertheless the driver of Bus B began glaring at him, and his face grew more and more crimson, until finally the winged words broke forth homericly, and he cursed the player with the noose as only a bus driver can curse another. Still the driver of Bus A kept saying nothing, and as innocently as ever playing with the noose. Then the "fare" who sat beside the driver of Bus A leaned forward and asked him, "What's the matter with that man?" indicating the driver of Bus B. "What's he so angry with you about? You're not doing him any harm."

"Matter with 'im?" said the noose player scornfully. "Why, 'e ain't got no sense o' humor; that's what's the matter with 'im. 'Is father was 'ung." —Westminster Gazette.

Common Sense in Exercise.

Exercise in itself is no doubt excellent, but is it well for a sane man to make it a fetish? Does it do a business man any good to swell the muscles of his back by wrestling with a rowing machine or to make his legs as hard as railroad ties by galloping about a canvas track? Is there any advantage, after all, in developing the sinews abnormally? Does a man who works with his brain gain anything by trying to imitate a hodgecarrier? The notion that the average business man will be benefited by developing the muscles of a stevedore is based on nothing more tangible than wild theorizing. In favor of it is the allegation that physical or brute strength spells health. Against it is the obvious and undoubted fact that millions of men who take no more exercise than their ordinary avocations require live to hale and hearty old age, and the further fact that the average athlete, for all his sinew and vigor, is seldom more healthy than the average desk slave or soft muscled man.—Baltimore Herald.

Paris on Rations, 1794.

Paris is on ration, like a besieged city. Each person receives from his section a baker's card and is thereby entitled to receive from the baker at the maximum price as much bread as the municipality consider sufficient for him and his family. This ration varies weekly. The baker is bound to calculate from the number of mouths he feeds the quantity of corn he will need to buy from the municipalities, who distribute it weekly. We, who are not obliged to faire queue at the bakers' doors—thanks to my employ, I am exempt from this, and a bare sufficiency of bread is delivered, together with meat and vegetables, at my lodging daily—have very little conception of the sufferings of those who are. The queues are somewhat differently regulated in different sections, but my host's daughters, who take it in turn to go, are often waiting from 4 o'clock until 8 or 9 in the morning.—Journal of a Spy.

The following English is of the "world language" order. It is from the Japan Mail:

This soap is specially made with the good trial for the materials and it will be used long time because it is very hard. If you once used it, it has the peculiarity of imparting its desirable Violet and noblest odor of Musk to other objects, and at least for the five days, it may be used to scent clothing, gloves, towel, handkerchief, summer—garment, and bed. Also, if you always used, it has a great economic, effectual point, not to be used perfumes, artificial musks, waters, etc. Its style is no adornment and the materials are made with great attention, therefore it is far superior than foreign made and its price is very lower.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. ## A QUEER MANIA.

Sicilian Prince Who Ruined Himself Buying Absurd Statuary.

The Sicilian Prince of Valguarnera at the beginning of the last century was a monomaniac of a rare description. He succeeded to one of the largest fortunes in Europe, his habits were studious and economical, he had no children, but in spite of these advantages for saving money he contrived to ruin himself. The prince had a fancy for grotesque statues, with which he adorned the stately mansion of his forefathers. Many descriptions of the place are extant, for it was renowned throughout Europe in its day. Brydone visited it, and he has left us a pleasant picture. Approaching by a noble avenue, one found the palace encircled by an "army" of monsters. "The absurdity of the wretched imagination which created them is not less astonishing than its wonderful fertility," says Brydone. "Some were a compound of five or six animals which have no resemblance in nature. In one instance the head of a lion was set upon the neck of a goose, with the body of a lizard, the eyes of a goat and the tail of a fox. Upon the back of this object stood another with five or six heads and a grove of horns. There is no kind of horn in the world that he has not collected, and his pleasure is to see them all flourishing on the same skull."

Of such horrors there were 600 in the avenue and courtyard alone when Brydone saw the collection, and the prince maintained a regiment of sculptors who were rewarded proportionately to their success in designing new and unparalleled combinations. The effect upon a superstitious peasantry may be imagined. So serious was the agitation that the government of Sicily threatened to demolish the wonderful array. Several times, but a prince of Valguarnera was not to be offended in those days without the gravest cause. Matrons of Palermo would not take their drives in that direction, fearing dire results. The inside of the house was eccentric in another fashion.

Here the madman diverted himself with columns and arches and pyramids of cups and saucers, teapots and the like cemented together. One column, for instance, started from a great porcelain vase of shape familiar in bedrooms, but not elsewhere. The shaft was teapots, with the spouts protruding, graduated in size up to a capital of flowerpots. The openings of windows were incrustated in this manner, the chimney pieces were loaded up to the ceiling, and the magnificent rooms of the palace were divided by fantastic arches of the same construction. China was rare and fine in Sicily at that day, and most of the pieces thus treated had great value. The prince's bedroom was a chamber of supreme horrors. Reptiles awful beyond conception had their home there, intermixed with pleasing busts and statues which, if turned, showed a skeleton or a hideous representation of decrepitude. We have never observed an allusion to these things in a modern work of travel. Perhaps the government destroyed them at the prince's death, beggared by his mania.

Distributing Wealth.

Why there should be hardworking poor men and idle rich men in the same community is a question which no one has answered and no one can answer satisfactorily. That is why the opinion is so prevalent that the world, economically considered, is so very much out of joint. But although there is so much unanimity in the opinion that wealth ought not to be distributed as it now is, there is still a wide diversity of opinion where there is any definite opinion at all as to how it really ought to be distributed. These opinions may, however, be reduced to three fundamentally distinct theories, which I shall call the aristocratic, the socialistic and the democratic, or liberalistic, theories. The aristocratic theory is that the good things of the world belong more particularly to certain groups or classes than to others by virtue of some circumstance connected with their birth or heredity and independently of their individual achievements. The socialistic theory is that wealth ought to be distributed according to needs or according to some similar plan arranged beforehand and independently of the individual ability to acquire wealth in the rough and ready struggle of life. The democratic, or liberalistic, theory is that wealth ought to be distributed according to productivity, usefulness or worth.—T. N. Carver in Atlantic.

The Melancholy Cuckoo.

The American cuckoo belongs to the woodpecker tribe and is only a summer visitor, coming about the 1st of June and leaving early in the fall for Florida. Unlike the English cuckoo, ours builds its own nest and raises its young, to whom it is a most devoted parent. We have two species in this country—the yellow bill and the black bill, the latter being best known in Pennsylvania. Both are smaller than the old world species and differ from it in color, being greenish olive above and bluish white beneath, while the European bird is black winged. The American cuckoo has a tall longer than its body, which gives it a hawklike appearance, and the plumage is soft and silky, like that of the owl, which enables it to fly without making any noise, so that we often hear its call without being able to see the bird. Burroughs says, "This call of the cuckoo has a solitary, hermitlike sound, as if the bird were alone in the world and called on the fates to witness his desolation." He has never heard the call answered, nor has he ever seen two birds together. The call is heard most in cloudy weather and before a rain, from which the bird gets the name of rain crow.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. ## Dangers of Defective Plumbing!

Defective plumbing permits the entrance into the house of sewer gas bearing germs or contagious disease to which the human system readily succumbs. Sewer gas is not necessarily generated in the sewer, but is frequently created in the plumbing system within the home and enters the apartments through defective fixtures. If in doubt, consult us regarding the piping and repairing defective fixtures with "STANDARD" Porcelain Enameled Ware, acknowledged as the best sanitary equipment.

Grand Opera House, Monday, Oct. 1st.

Elmer Walters' latest temperance play, "A Millionaire Tramp," which appears at the Grand Opera House, Monday evening, October 1, contains seven of the strongest comedy characters that have ever been collected in one play. Each one differs vastly from the other and lends opportunity for variety and action. The ghost scene in the first act and the dark porter's scene in the third act are two of the funniest imaginable. The dramatic scenes are fully abreast of the comedy and the scenic mounting, superb. The Church of the Holy Cross in the second act is one of the handsomest of its kind. The Country Opera House in the third act is a decided novelty—something entirely new and out of the ordinary, while the hotel in the last act is the very embodiment of quaintness. Prices 25, 35, and 50 cents.

Our Washington Letter.

BY EARL W. MAYO.

Washington, September 26.—That Kentucky's interest in increased appropriations for waterways improvements is such as to demand immediate attention, is the conclusion of Representative Swager Sherley, who thinks it high time that a nation so important commercially as the United States should begin to devote a proper proportion of its revenue to the benefits of commerce. In speaking of the local application of this policy in an interview given out today, Mr. Sherley said:

"We want navigable water the year round on the Ohio up to the coal fields of Pennsylvania. We want to be able to get that coal by the cheapest kind of transportation. I believe that the way to win for this project, as for all others throughout the country, is to fight for larger appropriations, and not to give to the army one hundred millions or more a year and only some $20,000,000 for the improvement of the waterways. Why, we have expended since the Spanish-American war nearly twice as much on the army as on rivers and harbors since the beginning of the nation. Since the beginning of the river and harbor appropriations there has been spent for this object about $400,000,000, whereas we have appropriated about $100,000,000 annually for preparations for war in the last few years."

"We ought to have larger appropriations for river and harbor work. While not complaining of the expenditures along other lines, I think that we should see to it that rivers and harbors get at least an approximately fair share." That a strong movement to "see to it," as Mr. Sherley puts it, is to be made at the next session of Congress can no longer be doubted. This movement, headed by the National Rivers and Harbors Congress is daily enlisting the support of more Congressmen who see in improved waterways the most efficient rate regulator and cheapest possible means of transportation.

After three months of sweltering emptiness, Washington is again beginning to fill up with luminaries of greater or less power who have been wandering over the world during the summer. It will not be long before the city can once again become of first importance, since the President is to return on the first of October, thus throwing open the season for those mysterious conferences at the White House on which the "it is reported" and "the President is known to have said" stories are based. As a matter of fact, one of the regular if unwelcome duties of the President until Congress opens is listening to the suggestions of citizens who have been abroad and want to tell him just how it is done in foreign countries. Of course, in many cases the information is important, but then again, the President is forced to listen to all sorts of trivialities, making his task of winnowing the wheat from the chaff a heavy one. Of course, everyone knows all about these matters before they are explained to the President. For instance, one man is known to be only waiting to tell Mr. Roosevelt all about the identification cards which it is necessary to present at postoffices in Germany to receive mail, thus doing away with misdelivery, while another wants to point a moral with the story of the public executioner of France, who, although he continues to draw his salary of $3,500 a year in spite of the fact that the death penalty practically has been abolished, insists that his conscience will not permit him to indulge in such graft and clamors for something to execute, that he may earn his pay. One prominent Washingtonian is bubbling over with the case of Rome—modern, not ancient—finding in its case the answer to Mr. Bryan's policies. The city government of Rome, it seems, inflamed with the spirit of Jack Cade because the price of bread seemed too high, decided to municipalize the bread-baking industry in order that the price might be lowered. Result: a black eye for municipal ownership, since the city bake shops came to an early end, the financial loss in two years being more than $20,000. Bread is back where it was since it is cheaper that way. And so it goes. If the President's ears be not wearied in the next six weeks listening to sage advice, and of wonderful stories do not once more emanate from Washington 'twill only be because something—perhaps the tariff—is out of whack.

Various department heads seem to be "thoroughly" stirred up, as the new spelling has it, over President Roosevelt's latest order, and Public Printer Stillings finds himself between the devil and the deep blue sea a good many times a day in consequence. On the one hand he has the President's instructions to use the new spelling in public documents; on the other, the howls of wrath from various persons who don't want it. The Navy Department is sore, because passed assistant surgeons are now called past assistant surgeons. That's the new spelling, but the surgeons in question object strenuously, since they find a world of difference between passed and past. They are glad to admit that they are passed, but they are not past, by a long shot, they declare. Likewise, the new spelling has it that comptroller shall henceforth be controller. But Comptroller of the Currency Ridgely says he is a comptroller and that he won't be a controller. Congress created his office as the former, and he insists that it shall so remain until Congress changes it. He won't be an ordinary controller for anything this side of Congress. Incidentally, the whole situation has been further complicated by the discovery that Congress has made a certain dictionary the standard of spelling. The naval surgeons and Mr. Ridgely intimate that in departing from this standard Mr. Stillings is also departing from the law of the land—while the latter gentleman has not finally decided whether he must obey the President or Congress. Meanwhile, the official documents look something like little Willie's latest composition.

CROP, STOCK, ETC.

—Warren Rogers weighed up half of his fat cattle—34 head—sold recently to Jonas Weil, and they averaged 1,403 pounds, sold at 5 cents.

—R. P. Barnett sold to Stewart & Lowe 90 tons of hay, more than one-half of which is mixed hay, at $10 per ton. The hay is baled and will be shipped.

—Thos. McClintock & Sons shipped one car load of 1,400 pound cattle to the Pittsburgh market, that cost 5 cents per pound, and one car extra fat hogs to Cincinnati market that cost $5.85 per hundred.

—The hemp crop this year in Madison county is one of the finest as well as the largest that has ever before been known there. On account of the scarcity of farm hands the crop has been a little late in being cut this season, but it is all in the shock by this time. J. B. Walker, who is perhaps one of the most experienced hemp raisers in Kentucky, had over five hundred acres in cultivation this year. The raising of this valuable fiber is comparatively a new industry in Madison county, as there was never much of it grown here until within the last three years.

Conducted Own Defense.

Await the Coming of the Famous Robinson Amusement Co.

This great amusement enterprise will leave Springfield, Ohio, on Sunday, September 30th, where they have been showing for the past week on the streets, and each and every merchant in the city have said their business has been greatly benefitted by the Carnival and are ready to sign for its coming next year. This great show will arrive at Paris on Sunday, September 30th at 4 p. m. and will remain here one solid week under the auspices of the Garth Lodge No. 43 A. O. U. W., and do all in their power with the ten big shows and four free acts to amuse and entertain all who may visit Paris next week.

This show visited this city last year and gave entire satisfaction, and the pioneer showman, Mr. Dan R. Robinson, is and has always been known to please those who come to see his shows. For the past ten years he has had one crew of agents with him, which alone speaks well for the shows, viz: Mr. Harry Bryan, promoter, 12 years; Mr. Sam H. Joseph, press agent, 14 years; Mr. Sam Ach, contest man, 10 years; Mr. J. T. Ford, assistant manager, 11 years, and 50 others, who are all working for him in the different parts of the shows, and the old saying is a man that can always please his employees can and will always please those who visit his great shows. He carries the great Royal Italian Band, which has a great reputation and carries twenty men. His shows are all strictly moral and first-class. Bring the ladies, as this is the show that caters to the fair sex. All next week, October 1-6.

Paris vs. Lexington.

Manager Lucas has arranged a series of three games with our old rivals, the Lexington ball team, to be played at Lexington September 30th, October 14th and 21st. Manager Lucas has secured a host of his old team, with McFarland and Devaney for his battery. Extra cars at 1 and 2 o'clock. Game called promptly at 3 o'clock. These games will be worth going to see as both sides will make special efforts to win and will undoubtedly have strong teams. The lineup for Paris team will be as follows:

McFarland, pitcher.
Devaney, catcher.
Etting, first base.
McKernan, second base.
Valdois, third base.
Schulte, short stop.
Schoenberger, center field.
Flick, right field.

Saloon Men Indicted.

Indictments were returned Tuesday at Mt. Sterling against Phil H. Davis and Frank Gibbons, saloon-keepers, charging them with forming a conspiracy, to kill the Rev. B. W. Trimble, editor of the Mt. Sterling Advocate. Mr. Trimble took an active part in the recent local option election in that city. Walter Harper was indicted for bribery in connection with the same election.

History Spoiled.

The Owen County Democrat spoils history, after this fashion: For nearly a century there has been a controversy among historians as to who ended the life of the redoubtable Indian chieftain, Tecumseh. The death of Uncle Kimbo Thomas, on Cedar Creek, Owen county, developed the fact that Colonel J. D. Lillard, of Owenton, sent the soul of the great Sachem to the happy hunting ground. Uncle Kimbo was a soldier in Col. Dick Johnson's regiment in the battle of the Thames and he was wont to recount, rarely, however, the stirring scenes of that sanguinary conflict. Uncle Kimbo said that amidst the clash of arms, when foot to foot and hand to hand, the savage and the white man fought for life, he saw the noble Indian and Colonel Dick Johnson front each other. Johnson raised his pistol to fire, while the chieftain brandished aloft his deadly tomahawk. The flint-lock of Colonel Johnson flashed in the pan. Just behind the heroic Johnson stood Jerry D. Lillard, then a boy of fifteen, and ere the hatchet of the Indian sped from his hand a musket ball from Lillard's gun laid him dead upon the field.

Woman's Trials.

The bitter trial in a woman's life is to be childless. Who can tell how hard the struggle may have been ere she learns to resign herself to her lonely lot? The absence of this link to bind marital life together, the absence of this one pledge to mutual affection is a common disappointment. Many unfortunate couples become estranged thereby. Even if they do not drift apart, one may read the whole extent of their disappointment in the eyes of such a childless couple when they rest on the children of others. To them the largest family does not seem too numerous.

In many cases of barrenness or childlessness the obstacle to child-bearing is easily removed by the cure of weakness on the part of the woman. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has been the means of restoring health and fruitfulness to many a barren woman, to the great joy of the household. In other, but rare cases, the obstruction to the bearing of children has been found to be of a surgical character, but easily removable by a painless operative treatment at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., over which Dr. Pierce of the "Favorite Prescription" fame presides. In all cases where children are desired and are absent, an effort should be made to find out the real cause, since it is generally so easily removed by proper treatment.

In all the various weaknesses, displacements, prolapsus, inflammation and debilitating, catarrhal drains and in all cases of nervousness and debility, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the most efficient remedy that can possibly be used. It has to its credit hundreds of thousands of cures—more in fact than any other remedy put up for sale through druggists, especially for women's use. The ingredients of which the "Favorite Prescription" is composed have received the most positive endorsement from the leading medical writers on Materia Medica of all the several schools of practice. All the ingredients are printed in plain English on the wrapper enclosing the bottle, so that any woman making use of this famous medicine may know exactly what she is taking. Dr. Pierce takes his patients into his full confidence, which he can afford to do as the formula after which the "Favorite Prescription" is made will bear the most careful examination. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best and safest laxative for women.

Rights of Shippers Protected.

Rights of shippers in Kentucky are to be protected by an agreed order entered Tuesday in the United States Court at Frankfort, requiring all railroads within the State to preserve all way bills until after a decision on the power of the Railroad Commission to fix freight tariffs. A difference in favor of the shipper may be recovered in case the decision of the commission is upheld.

Hides Body in Rubbish.

After carrying the dead body of her child in a telescope for three days and keeping it in her room most of the time Amanda Price, a white domestic at Cynthia, hid it in some rubbish in an old barn in the rear of the Columbia Hotel in that city, where it was found by some negroes who turned it over to the coroner.

Moved by the story of the woman's sufferings the coroner's jury returned a verdict that the child's death was not caused by any willful or intentional guilt or murder.
